Sustainable investing: investing in a cleaner planet

Today we consume more resources than our earth can sustainably provide, and dealing with all the waste produced is getting incredibly expensive. Also, it's a waste to throw things out. By promoting the continuous use, recycling and repurposing of materials and products, the circular economy can help minimise waste and resource depletion. Sectors such as electronics and textiles have the biggest opportunity to add value by embracing circularity. How do industries move towards circular business models? How can investors support the transition to a circular economy?
